

Wild Toss by Merkle Beats Giants in Tenth

Pirates Win Their First Game of Series After Close Struggle.

ANDERSON DRIVEN FROM THE MOUND

Ferdie Schupp Succeeds Him and Holds Visitors Hitless for Six Innings.

By GRANTLAND RICE.

Ferdie Schupp tossed his willow left arm in front of the Pirates yesterday, holding them to one safe hole in seven rounds. But for all that Ferdie's brave display was offered in a lost cause. This lone punch was linked in the tenth inning to an infield error, and the Giants were beaten, 4 to 3, in another overtime setback. It was all highly amazing, because Schupp's pitching deserved a better fate, while his mates scrambled up a soft chance to win over the regulation route.

Fred Anderson went out against Cooper, but Fred was pummeled off the mound in three painful innings. The Pirates reached Fred for six hits and three runs before Ferdie came dashing out in great haste to make it seven straight. For six innings the Giant southpaw held the visitors hitless, but with the score tied in the tenth Hinchman whaled a triple over Kauff and scored a moment later when Merkle pegged Farmer's brief tap into the dust at Rariden's quivering feet. In spite of Cooper's steady pitching the Giants had an easy shot at victory in the ninth.

A Lost Chance.

The score was knotted here at 3 and 3. In their time at bat the home guard managed to eke out a pass, two long singles and a steal without obtaining the needed run. Before a break of this sort no wonder young Schupp looked upon existence with considerable pain.

Kauff opened this inning with a walk. Fred Merkle followed. Fred took a wallop at one, decided to bunt, and then as Kauff dashed to second he took a short pop-up to Cooper. That break in the battle rolled the Giants back into the morass, for Benny was promptly doubled at first, and two long singles by Fletcher and Rariden went to utter and absolute waste. The Giants needed only one run, and can't turn the trick on a pass, two long singles and a steal of second, all lumped to Ketcher.

Anderson started, but was out of focus. The visiting element was shooting him full of holes when McGraw decided to rush in Schupp. Ferdie reported with enough stuff to blow away and trounce. He issued three passes and struck Farmer on the spine, but they couldn't hit him. It was not until Hinchman snaked the fatal triple that Schupp reached dangerous waters.

After the Pirates had punished Anderson for three runs the Giant attack went after Cooper with a rush. They got one run back in the first on Doyle's double and Robertson's single. They tied up the game in the fourth on Herzog's walk, Kauff's single and a long single by Merkle, who drove both tallies over on Schulte's momentary fumble.

When Schupp entered the rest of it looked to be a piece of seven straight. He had the stuff, and his mates, led by Herzog, were backing him up in brilliant style. Herzog played one of his many great games at third, scooping up chance after chance. Here is one sample:

In the sixth McCarthy walked. Fischer followed with a line drive to left. As the ball sailed over Herzog's head he, the Giant baseman, leaped high in the air and knocked it down. Art Fletcher, who was backing up the play, snatched the ball for a force at second, killing off the rally.

Double Play Saves Cooper. Cooper held the Giants to four hits and no runs in the last six frames, but the double play was all that saved him in the ninth. When ball club blows a chance of that sort it doesn't often come again, and when Hinchman's triple came in the tenth there was nothing else to it. Farmer, who for the first time in the series, pumped a high bounder to Merkle, who, in attempting to hurry the throw to the plate, tossed the ball into the dirt for the winning run.

Schupp has pitched remarkable ball since he picked up confidence several weeks ago. His work at each start has been beyond any reproach. Fine speed hooked to a fast curve has carried him along, and for him yesterday. Only it didn't. In this case, however, the defeat should be charged against Anderson.

Schupp went in with the score 3 to 1 against him, and while the course of the scoring was accomplished before Ferdie rushed his left arm to the scene, Schupp had a chance to save the day in the ninth, with Fletcher on third and Rariden on second, but Cooper had him numbered with the missing for a strike that followed.

As both Brooklyn and Boston won the Giants dropped back another game, and to-day are ten long strides from the summit. Any further slipping now will be close to fatal, for spotting the Robins ten games in August doesn't admit of much idling along the sultry way.

CALDWELL SUSPENDED FOR FIFTEEN DAYS

St. Louis, Aug. 1.—Ray Caldwell, pitcher for the New York Americans, was suspended without pay to-day and fined $100. The suspension will last fifteen days. The fine was imposed for infraction of the club rules.

The Prodigal's Return,

The High Cost of Veal

By W. O. MCGEEHAN.

REEL 1.—John McGraw, a rich and haughty baseball manager, quarrels with his poor, but proud, shortstop, Buck Herzog. Buck has been trying to touch the payroll for a five-case advance to go to a moving picture show. "You will take your choice between the moving picture show and the Giants," says McGraw haughtily. "Your batting eye is on the blink, as it is, but you putting it further to the Fritz with those trick lights in the movie."

"The Giants can chase themselves," replies Buck with the hauteur of a poor but proud player. "You can chase yourself right now and out of the lot, too," retorts McGraw, his face registering rage. "I go, but I shall return," says Herzog.

"Not unless somebody wraps you in a wooden overcoat and leaves you in my doorway," shrieks McGraw. "I shall return," says Herzog, as he hoots at the departing prodigal.

REEL 2.—Buck Herzog arrives in Porkopolis to eat hushers, bread, limburger and to consort with the swine generally. After a few months in the place, he begins to talk in a dignified way, as if he were a real inhabitant of the place. The only thing that distinguishes him from a genuine porcine native is that he can never learn to squeal.

In spite of this defect in his qualifications for Porkopolis citizenship he is put in charge of the baseball team. Buck's teeth go bad chewing on the hushers, and association with the swine grates on his proud sensitive nature. He longs for the bright lights of 125th Street, and in a vision he sees the sun sinking behind Coogan's bluff. But he recalls the cruel words of McGraw, and his face registers resolution as he raises his hand and says: "I never will return."

REEL 3.—Things are breaking badly for John McGraw, the haughty and wealthy manager. The Giants have not won a game for almost a month, and John is losing the confidence of the team. In the initial game to-day Russell's fine pitching, with good fielding, prevented the visitors from scoring, while the locals bunched hits off Nahors. Scott started the second game, but was unable to hold the Athletics, and was succeeded by Danforth in the fourth, with one run, two on and none out. A double play checked the rally.

Yankees Beaten Again, Browns Make Record

Donovan's Cripples Fight to Fourteenth Trench—Twelve in Row for St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 1.—The St. Louis Browns established a season's record for consecutive victories in the American League when they defeated the New York Yankees in the sixth and final game of the series here this afternoon.

The Browns have now won twelve games in a row, and not even the fact that they face the Boston Red Sox Wednesday is causing any dismay. The score was 3 to 2, and fourteen innings were played before Armando Marsans settled the issue with a rousing single.

A most unusual situation exists in the American League. The Browns have won and lost forty-nine games, for a percentage of .500, leaving the lowly and downtrodden Athletics the only team in the league which has lost more games than it won. Moreover, the tribe of Jones, resting, as it does, in seventh place, is within seven and one-half games of the Boston Red Sox, which lead the league and have climbed to within four and one-half games of the Yankees.

While the Browns were soaring to a new mark, the Yankees were busy establishing a little record of their own. They have lost six straight games now, and there seems to be no relief in sight. Constant injuries have broken up the team work, and the team is in a disorganized condition. More changes were made to-day.
